Can Take Care Of Labor Difficulties Ourselves -- Police Commission Says

Picketing May Disturb Town's Prosperity Statement Reads

The following statement has been received from the Newmarket Police Commission.

TO CITIZENS OF NEWMARKET Re the Union Activities in our Town

It was our intention and hope that as a Police Commission we might remain neutral in the disagreement between the Dressmakers' Union and the little clothing factory which has established itself in our town. Our purpose was to confine our activities entirely to the protection of property and the privacy of our residents, to keeping our streets clear of loitering and preventing agitation becoming a nuisance in any of our homes.

What you see on our streets accompanied by inflammatory literature is quite unneeded and unnecessary as any quarrel the Union may have with the present company it seems to us should be settled in a proper court and if their case will not stand court action they have resorted to methods outside of the law to accomplish their designs. It should be noted that they are very evasive in their purpose. If they wish to take the factory back to Toronto it seems inconsistent that if a management has been so unfair to its employees
as we draw from their pamphlets
why should they be so desirous of having it again in the city.
The logical conclusion is that they are determined to destroy the investment of this little factory and to compel it to suspend operations by methods which are unlawful.

The girls in the factory are already looking better, are dressed better and have about them the cheerful air of employment and independence. The conditions under which they work are on a par with any modern factory.
There is no lock and key except to prevent unwelcome agitators who might be willing to enter and embarrass them. Any disagreement that the council have with the employers we assure you will be taken up if and when the occasion arises in a law abiding and a law respecting manner.
The town of Newmarket has come through a very serious financial crisis and today we are very pleased to see employment on the upgrade in our municipality. There has been in the town of Newmarket the closest and most friendly understanding between employee and employer,

the council and the citizens of Newmarket and today the credit of Newmarket is the highest it has been for many years.

Over this picture of quiet and law-abiding prosperity the shadow of labor difficulties has fallen and we wish to go on record as a Police Commission that we can take care of our labor difficulties ourselves and as a council we will always see fair play
as far as possible between employees and employers. The pic-ketting on our street is allowed by law and must be peaceful and interfere with no one either citizens or employees. They are not to continue moving and are not to encourage loitering or follow any of the employees into their homes. If they persist in requesting admission to homes
the complaints should be given to the Mayor or the Chief Constable. They have no rights in this town beyond peacefully and quietly walking up and down in front of the factory for purposes of obtaining information and any effort to embarrass employees or frighten them should be immediately reported. We regret to say that these activities are unwell-come in our town and we warn the citizens of Newmarket to give a wide berth to these professional agitators. The picketing is only the thin edge of a wedge which may disturb seriously the prosperity of this town when the labor troubles instigated and kept up by paid agitators serious disturbances may result always bringing grief and privation to the children and wives of employees.

The whole campaign is one of reprisal, destroying something not their own and in which they have no investment taking law in their own hands. Also if further pamphlets are issued we ask the author to attach his name to such and confine his statements to whole, not half, truths.
We are sorry to be brought in to this argument but we will deal severely with any lawlessness resulting from the activities of outsiders disturbing the peace of the town.

Signed Dr. L. W. Dales, M. D., Chairman Police Commission.

Schools Reopen September 6

H. A. Jackson, principal of Newmarket public schools, has announced that the advance registration for pupils in the Newmarket public schools who will be attending for the first time, and for those who have moved to Newmarket since the close of school in June and not previously registered here, will be held on Friday, Sept.
2, from 9.30 a.m. to 11.30 a.m. at each of the schools.

Parents and guardians are requested to register their children so that classes may be arranged prior to the opening of school on Sept. 6.

CITIZENS' BAND TO HOLD TATTOO

The Newmarket Citizens' band is undertaking one of the greatest achievements of its career in the form of a band tattoo. Ten of Ontario's outstanding bands are going to participate, 350 musicians including Brampton Citizens' band, Orillia Klitte band, Oshawa regiment band (Tanks), Uptown Optimist and York band and Barrie Citizens' band, all bands of outstanding ability.
Aurora Boys' and Citizens' bands and the local bands will also be present. A trophy is being presented for the best marching and playing band of the evening.

This tattoo will be an inspiring event of color and glamor with regimental march pasts and musical bands. A colorful parade will be held through the town prior to the tattoo.

Tickets are now on sale and will be eligible for valuable prizes. Committees have been formed to handle this tattoo and local organizations are co-operating splendidly. All citizens are asked to get on the band wagon and make this tattoo the splendid success it deserves to be.

BOTH MANAGERS TALK GOOD GOLF -- FEUD RAGES

Controversy concerning the golf-feud between Herbie Cain and Larry Molyneux was still raging bitterly this week, with their respective managers, J. L.
Spillette and C. W. Holmes, both talking a brilliant game of golf.

While the date for competition
for the coveted "Hamburg Stakes" has not yet been named,
the argument has reached the stage where this detail is apt to crop up any time.

"To date this man Molyneux has not accepted the challenge," Manager Spillette declared. "He is asking for a handicap of five strokes. If we play on the Aurora course, he wants winter rules."

"But just to show him that our hearts are in the right place, Mr.
Cain will agree to play the entire 18 holes left-handed. Mr.
Cain is one of the finest young golfers in the county," concluded
Mr. Spillette.

C. W. Holmes, manager of the Molyneux camp, presented another side of the story.

"You can say that on behalf of Larry Molyneux, I hereby challenge Mr. Cain to 18 holes, more or less, on any course in the United States or Canada, on which neither player has before played."

"We hope Mr. Spillette will soon be through with his baseball troubles and will be able to devoted all his time to managing Mr.
Cain. We understand Mr. Cain is going to Toronto for Turkish baths. He'll need them. Mr.
Cain has asked for a handicap.
All he will get from us is a lot of abuse."

It is understood that Mr.
Molyneux is willing to play the entire 18 holes right-handed,
which would tend to support the view that his heart is also in the right place.

ST. PAUL'S S. S.

Treatment In Spring Prevents Hay Fever In Fall, Doctor Says

An Era reporter visited a local doctor this week to ascertain the treatments used for hay fever and asthma, as these ailments are most prevalent in the fall of the year.

"I am doing some work along this line now," the doctor explained, as he showed the reporter several small bottles of different pollens he had collected.

"In the winter time the pollens of several different weeds should be injected under the skin of the patient to find which pollen causes a reaction," stated the doctor. "Then in April the patient should start taking injections to combat the pollen that caused the reaction, and continue the inoculation until August, at which time he should be immune. The inoculations are supposed to create an immunity in the patient to the pollen
he is susceptible to."

"These inoculations have to be taken each year by the patient but maybe after three or four years of treatment he will be able to miss a year," said the doctor.

"In the fall of the year there is more hay fever because the pollen from the two chief offenders, rag-weed and goldenrod, is

CHANGES ARE ANNOUNCED IN METHODIST PASTORATES

Changes in Free Methodist pastorates made at the annual conference held recently are announced. Rev. R. L. Casement is leaving Newmarket for Broadview church, Toronto, and Rev. B. Babcock of Holt is coming to Newmarket.

Rev. N. F. Perry will go to Holt and Rev. S. S. Bailey of Armadale is taking his place at Bracebridge.
Rev. J. T. King is taking charge at Armadale.

All these pastors will preach farwell sermons on Sunday.

HERDS ARE ALL FREE FROM T. B. INSPECTOR SAYS

Farmers Are Improving Milk
Houses, Barns, Report States

Dr. J. R. Lockhart, town milk inspector, reports that all herds supplying milk to the Newmarket dairies are free from tuberculosis and bang's disease and there is no milk from any diseased cattle coming into town.

In his last rounds he found one cow suffering from mastitis
and it was isolated from the herd.
Several farmers are building
new and improved milk houses,
and are also improving their dairy barns.

One shipper was discontinued because of unsatisfactory conditions about the farm premises
but was allowed to continue when the objectionable features were removed and his place brought up to the standard of the town milk by-law.

The Newmarket Dairy has added an extension to their smoke stack in order to try to get away from the smoke that has been noticed by the residents around the dairy.

RECALLS EDGAR BOGART, SUNDAY SCHOOL HELPER

Mrs. James Adie, who, as "Katie Smith" wrote so interestingly of her recollections of Newmarket's early days in The Era recently, continues her description of Newmarket in the '40's.

About 1886 the Congregational church in Newmarket was closed.
I think some years later the building was sold to the "Friends." My father had been minister there. My parents then attended the Presbyterian church where father had a lot of supply work, before Rev. Mr. Bell was given a call.

It really was too far for me to walk back there to Sunday-school at three p.m. after being to church at 11, so I started to the Methodist Sunday-school. In later years my dad thought it better that I should attend the Sunday-school of the church which I attended but I never could see it.

I loved the Methodist Sunday-school, and today it stands out in my mind as a remarkable piece of work. Everyone seemed so happy, and perhaps one reason for that was the fine orchestra which was playing as we entered. I think L. G. Jackson played the violin. The singing was very hearty and appealing to a child. Charles Smith, our neighbor in the north end, a member of the orchestra, played a horn.

One of our chief pleasures was the library of fine and carefully selected books in charge of Edgar Bogart, Johnny Hughes, and Jack Montgomery. They did a big business Sunday afternoons.

Miss Belfry was my first teacher, in the primary class.
She was the middle-aged sister of J. P. Belfry, the Sunday-school superintendent, and a very thorough teacher. Before we

LOCAL BAND WILL PLAY IN AURORA

The Newmarket Citizens' and Aurora Boys' bands will give a program of music in front of the Aurora high school on Wells St.
on Sunday evening, Aug. 28. It will commence at 8.15 p.m. Robert Moore, W. D., first vice president, C. B. A., will conduct the program.

The program is as follows:
hymn, Dowston Castle, arranged by R. Moore; march, Armada, by C. Holmes; overture, Monogram, by C. Holmes; serenade, Idle Thoughts, by C. E. Roberts; hymn, Agnes Dei, arranged by R. Moore. These selections are all by the Aurora boys.

The Newmarket Citizens' band will play as follows: march, Potpourri, Passing of the Regiment, by A. Winter; cornet solo, My Old Kentucky Home, W. Rimmer, soloist musician, W. Greig; selection, Cloches de Corvillie, by Laurendeau; this is better known as The Chimes of Normandy; paraphrase, In the Cloisters, by Leo Torrance; clarinet duet, Merriment Polka, by Barnard;
duetists musicians, M. Lyons and
A. Brammer; finale, A Military Tattoo, by McKenzie Rogan;
synopsis, Gun Fire, Signal Call, Assembly March, Trumpet Sound,
Grand Tattoo, Creations, hymn (Beethoven), Call to Prayer, evening hymn, Abide with Me, Lights Out, and God Save the King.

W. A. WILL MEET

The Woman's Association of Trinity United church will hold their regular meeting on Thursday, Sept. 1, at 3 o'clock in the junior room. All ladies are urged to be present and help outline fall work. The president will take charge of the meeting.

ASK PUPILS TO PREPARE EXHIBITS THEMSELVES

"The object of the school fair
is to teach and develop the boys and girls by having them do things for themselves," a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture and W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative for York county, reads.

"Parents are urged to allow the children to do all the work in growing and preparing their exhibits without assistance. The work you do for them defeats
the object of the school fair."

School fairs announced this year in York county: Sept. 9, Shiloh; Sept. 12, Belhaven; Sept.
13, Sharon; Sept. 14, Kettleby;
Sept. 15, Nobleton; Sept. 16, Vellore; Sept. 19, Vandon; Sept. 20, Stouffville; Sept. 21, Unionville;
Sept. 22, Agincourt; Sept. 23, Thistleton.

Reds Lead Allandale 2-1 As Game Called

Brammer, Cunningham Hit
To Give Victory In Final Tussle

By LORNE MCCORDICK

There was weeping in the bay and wailing in the roundhouse up in Allandale on Tuesday night, as all Allandale bemoaned the loss of the third and final ball game in the Newmarket series.

Newmarket won the game, it is true, but whether this ends the long, drawn-out series or not is difficult to say, as Allandale may protest the game.

With Newmarket leading, 2-1, at the beginning of the seventh, Head Umpire Larry Molyneux called the game due to the alleged interference caused by a rabid supporter of the railroad town, who was razing
the players at the plate.

Several of the Imperials remonstrated with the fellow, asking that he move away or keep quiet, but he refused to back water. As it was a public park, the disturber could not be ejected and so the game was called.

Due to a ruling made before the game, five innings constituted a game and so Newmarket won by a 2-1 edge. It is highly probable that Allandale will protest the game, as most of the Imperials thought the head umpire did not have the power to call a game due to interference of a spectator off the playing field.

The locals are willing to play another game, it is stated, but it must be at Newmarket, as the Imperials have had three home games to the Redmen's two. It was unfortunate that such an affair had to crop up as the game,
in contrast to other recent ones,
was otherwise everything a softball match should be.

Allandale gained a one-run lead in the first which was not overcome until the fourth, when Harry Brammer and Charlie Cunningham chained up a run each for the Redmen. Both Niles, for the Reds, and Goring for the losers, were bearing down in great style and safe hits were scarcer than hens' teeth.

The playing field was in disgraceful condition with the grass in the outer pasture being well over ankle deep. The officials had zealously striven to fill in the dangerous hole at the pitcher's box and the sods were flying all night
as the moundmen endeavored to reduce the pile to something they could at least see over.

Newmarket Reds who made the trip to Allandale were VanZant, C; Niles, p; Peters, lb; Brammer, 2b;
Tunney, 3b; Hilton, ss; Gibney, rf; Giles, cf; Cunningham, lf.

the Reds gathered one more run in each. Allandale added their second run in the seventh inning
but the game was never in doubt after the second inning so far as the Reds were concerned.

The game in itself was a well-played affair with arguments and disputes being a minus quantity.

Sharon Evens Series With 4-1 Victory Over Willow Beachers

Sharonites Score All Runs
In Second; To Play
Again Friday

Sharon evens the series with Willow Beach on Tuesday at Sharon Park, winning the game by the score of 4-1. A strong wind made it difficult to field fly balls and several got away from the outfielders. McNeil allowed five hits, and struck out three batters. Willow Beach had four hits off Ganton, who had five strike-outs to his credit.

The Sharon team scored all their runs in the second inning.
Jack Smith tripled and Ross Eves
singled scoring Smith.

Sharon went to second base on a passed ball and was out at third when he tried to steal the base.

Cook was the second out on a grounder to McNeil who threw him out at first base. Roy Eves, Ganton, and Don Smith walked.
Roy Eves scored on a passed ball, and Ganton and D. Smith advanced to third and second base.
Dew singled scoring Ganton and D. Smith. Bill Newfield struck out to end the inning.

Willow Beach scored their only run in the fifth inning. McKelvey went all the way to third base when a grounder went through Cook. Hedge hit a ground ball to D. Smith and Mc-Kelvey was out at the plate trying to score. Thompson was safe on an error by Don Smith. C.
Fairbairn popped out shortstop.

All the runners were safe when

Saskatchewan Crop Below Average, Subscriber Says

Grasshoppers Have Struck Hardest In Central West
Province

Mrs. C. S. McGill, an Era subscriber in Oxbow, Sask., has taken the trouble to send in newspaper reports of the crop situation there. "The situation is recorded mildly rather than being overdrawn," Mrs. McGill writes.

"Worst grasshopper blizzard in history swept Regina and brought tragedy," she states.
The Regina Leader-Post. "While provincial officials urged farmers to cut crops quickly to save the grain, grasshoppers were crawling on men's necks and across women's throats, buzzing at a mile-a-minute speed through open car windows."

"Farmers were urged Friday to get out and cut their crops without waiting for them to ripen.
This was the only way they could prevent wholesale grasshopper damage, they were told by S. H. Vigor, fields crop com-

Saskatchewan's wheat crop was one-third cut or better on Aug.
12, the paper states. The grasshoppers do not always make a clean sweep, however, and the papers cite cases of fields unharmed, yielding 50 bushels to the acre of No. 1 northern wheat.

Saskatchewan's wheat crop
will be below the ten-year level, another report states. Present prospects in Alberta point to the best crop since 1932, when 107
million bushels were harvested.
Western Canada as a whole can still harvest 300 million bushels, with a possibility of 325 million bushels, it is stated. The prospective crop has dwindled ten per cent in the past month, according to quotations from the dominion bureau of statistics report.

Three Boquets Given In Week To Boys Of R. S. A. Bugle Band

Compliments and engagements have been coming the way of the R. S. A. Bugle Band a little more thickly than usual for the past week. They started with their appearance at the Mulock picnic at Woodbridge on Saturday, when they were appointed to escort Prime Minister Mackenzie King from the station to the fair grounds.

Later in the day they acted as guard of honor to the Salvation Army band from Flint, Mich.
Members of the S. A. band were loud in their praise of the Newmarket boys, and on their arrival at the fair grounds, gave the lads

three rousing cheers.

On Tuesday this week the buglers and drummers received a request for their presence at the Prince's Gate, Canadian Exhibition grounds, on warriors' day.
They will take part in the parade with the C. N. R. veterans, who were so well satisfied with the boys' work at the time of the corps reunion in Toronto, that they want them back again.

HOW OTHER TOWNS TACKLE THEIR PROBLEMS

When we read of the opening of the new international bridge through the St. Lawrence's Thousand Islands, it does not occur to us that anyone is injured by it. When we hear of a new regulation requiring tourists to spend 48 hours in Canada to be eligible for the purchase of $100 worth of tariff-free goods, we do not think of anyone being injured by it. Apparently however, there are those in the town of Gananoque, formerly a ferry town, who are talking of hanging crepe on closed town gates. Gananoque is injured by the bridge and by the four-day regulation, which does not help border (or river) business. Nevertheless, Gananoque isn't going to die so easily if the town council and chamber of commerce act on suggestions made in the Gananoque Reporter. The Reporter proposes that the town arrange and supervise water sports every Friday and Saturday, and a sacred band concert every Sunday evening. The town will also advertise its natural beauty and its attractions, if the suggestions made are acted upon.

A Good Proverb

It reminds us of a proverb or adage: "Make your cross your crutch and hit them on the head with it."

A HARD-HEARTED PUBLICATION

We never knew before that there was such a publication, but now we do. A Toronto publication named "Marketing," to which we subscribe, doesn't publish anything to please anyone. This publication states that it "publishes no puffs." No news item is published "by request" of anyone concerned, it states. "We are not partial to any firm, or product, or advertising medium, or private interest of any kind—and publish nothing (outside the advertising columns) to please or promote the business of any present or prospective subscriber, advertiser or 'friend.'"

All Puffed Up

Occasionally, we don't see our way clear to publishing items which people ask us to put in The Era, usually because we do not think they are of local interest, but, generally speaking, this would be a sorry newspaper if it were not for the multitude of people who bring in, mail in or phone items about themselves and their friends. We invite you to sit down and count the number of "puffs" which appear in any issue of The Era, and, moreover, we warrant that 99 out of 100 of them are well merited, and the other one will perhaps encourage the lost sheep to become more "puffable."

A RECONSTRUCTION ECHO

An interesting experiment has been made at Bowmanville. Town councils usually have ideas about how weekly newspapers should be run. The council, by invitation, wrote the editorials for the Canadian Statesman for one week. One article revealed the members of the council to be very much fed up with the economic set-up in Canada. In quite strong language the council said some radical things—much more radical things than the Statesman usually says. We quote a few paragraphs from one editorial:

"Canada, where 15 families have control of 40 per cent of the country's wealth and in reality control governments, industry, commerce and the other 11 million Canadians.

"Canada, where for every $100 of national wealth produced, one person gets 58.9 per cent, 22 people average $1.02 and 77 Canadians are left to share $7; where 22 per cent of the people are destitute at the age of 65 and where 82 per cent of the people live at a bare subsistence level.

"Canada, where the backbone of the country, the farms, have an average annual income of $700, produce raised and consumed on the farms included, with an estimated 70 per cent of farm help receiving no wages.

"Canada, where 11,000 people with incomes over $10,000 yearly (mainly unearned income from investments) receive from our national wealth more than the combined incomes of 400,000 Canadian workers.

"Canada a country of contrasts—where the farmers continue to produce half the annual wealth, doing over half the work and are rewarded with one-seventh of the national income for their efforts—however one packing company reported profits of over eight million on Canadian farm produce and another firm after exploiting Canadian farmers sent 11 millions in profits to the company's headquarters in U.S.A.

"Canada, where the million dollar income is taxed 9.8 per cent and the working man's sugar is taxed 20 per cent—where 6 per cent of the workers get less than $800 a year in wages and the wage expectancy of a youth of 21 in 1938 is just half the wages available to the youth in 1911.

"Canada, where a federal investigation costing a half a million dollars (and worth ten times that much) produced the only official document ever tabled in the house of commons that effectively reveals and deals with the causes, results and remedies of 'poverty in the midst of plenty.' That the reforms based on this report and providing fair prices to the farmer, fair wages to the worker and fair profits to business were opposed by over three-quarters of Canada's voters.

"Canada, our country, where the leaders of the nation answer every suggestion for progressive action by asking 'where is the money coming from'—where the present hope for reviving business lies in gigantic preparations for war—munition and armament building—while funds are not available for constructive purposes such as housing, roads and social projects."

WEEKLY PRESS

A lot of kind things are said about the weekly press by speakers at weekly newspaper conventions, by the daily press sometimes and by the weekly press itself most frequently. And we are not going to disagree with them either. One of these kind remarks is that the weekly newspaper is close to its readers, serves them well and expresses their point of view accurately. This is a result of the weekly's usually small organization. Its writers are also its business office staff and sometimes its composing-room staff, and not infrequently its readers. Now if the readers write their own newspaper, they are not going to have much difficulty in expressing their own point of view, are they?

Another kind remark is that a weekly newspaper has a good deal of stability. The idea is partly that the weekly doesn't rush into print with its opinions, some articles having as much as six days to cool before they see the light of day. The idea is also partly that the weekly newspaper editor is usually also the owner of the business and has a stake in the community. He is an employer and he is selling advertising and printing to business men and to corporations. The result is that the weekly editor is usually quite conservative in his opinions.

Weekly newspapers tend to be conservative for at least three reasons, first, because their editor-owners tend to be that way, second, because their customers are that way, and third, because they reflect the opinions of their readers closely and rural people generally, particularly farmers, tend to be conservative. We guess it is a good thing too, so that new ideas are not adopted too hurriedly. Liberalism and open-mindedness are also important qualities, and we believe that nowhere in Ontario, thanks to the influence of Pickering College, Joseph McCulley, Leonard Harman, and to intellectual and cultural gifts from pioneer forefathers, will more liberalism be found than in old North York.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT

Only through a united effort in the form of a strong national government, manned by Liberals and Conservatives, can there be any hope of preserving democracy in Canada, believes the Simcoe Reformer. The Reformer remarks that Canada marked her 71st birthday by bringing to a close "one of the longest and most futile sessions in the history of Canada's parliament." We see no threat to democracy, for we believe it was ever thus with democracy, but we do think that during the depression years our governments, Liberal and Conservative, have done a little less than usual. The Reformer says: "The foundations of our democratic form of government are being shaken by our utterly inefficient methods of transacting the country's business and promoting the country's welfare, and principally because the leaders of our political parties and their satellites are more deeply concerned about their success in attaining and retaining office and in rewarding their partisans in all parts of the dominion than they are in providing progressive and intelligent legislation for Canada's development."

Lot Of Truth In It

We may hero-worship Mr. Bennett and Mr. King as much as we please, but the cruel truth remains that they are more concerned about the welfare of their parties than the welfare of their country. The Reformer believes that Mr. Bennett might have achieved something in his last days in office if the Liberals had not fought his reform program. The Bennett government, says the Reformer, left office with economic conditions worse than when it took office (admitting that world conditions were difficult), and now the King government "has achieved the unenviable reputation of being the greatest stand-pat administration in Canada's history."

Give Us Parties With Principles

One-party government is undesirable, but two-party government, when the difference between the parties is artificial and just the difference between those who have control of patronage and those who want it, is worse. The sooner Liberals and Conservatives merge, governing the country as long as they can command public confidence, and passing the job of opposition and criticism along to the newer and more radical parties, representing a real difference of opinion, the better it will be for this country.

INDUSTRIAL DIVERSIFICATION

The advice not to "put your eggs all in one basket" is possibly contradicted by the advice to "stick to your bush" or the proverb that "he who is jack of all trades is master of none." Yet there must be truth in all these sayings or they would not have their present currency. The Acton Free Press believes that a town is better advised not to put all its eggs in one industrial basket:

The general public will give hearty approval to the arrangements that have been completed by the reeve and council, in conjunction with Mr. R. M. McDonald, in securing an industry for the shoe factory building. First failure was not allowed to mean complete failure, and the Force Electric Products, who will now occupy the factory, are a going concern, locating here with the thought of expansion in mind.

It is fortunate that Acton is able to diversify its industries and is building on a sound basis of a number of smaller manufacturing establishments, rather than concentration on one or two larger manufacturing establishments. The brothers who are the executive of the Force Electric Products will find a hearty and co-operative welcome in becoming established in Acton. Viewed from a shipping and manufacturing centre, we felt, too, that the new concern will soon realize that no mistake was made in establishing Acton as their headquarters.

The arrangement is one that will be beneficial to all concerned. The truth of the old motto of "Try, try, try again" has been well exemplified.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

THIRD WEDNESDAY IN AUGUST

Not very long ago I heard some one say, "grandmothers are not what they used to be."

"Certainly not," said a listener. "Why should grandmothers, because they ARE grandmothers, be condemned to revert to a type which passed away with hoop skirts and net caps?"

"I don't see it at all," persisted the first speaker. "my grandmother was a REAL grandmother. She always wore black dresses with little white bands at her neck and wrists and a little white muslin apron. You'd know she was a grandmother whenever you looked at her."

"Yes," said the second speaker, but what was her life like, after her husband died and her children grew up and had families of their own? Had she interests, did she go about and see things, join in the work of life going on about her?"

"Oh, dear no," said lady number one. "that was one of her charms, she helped a little about the house—did all the mending and that sort of thing, and then sat and knitted in a quiet place, the rest of the time."

"Hm," said lady two, "I wonder just what sort of a kick she got from that kind of a life?"

"I'm sure she was fond of us, and she DID go to church," said the arguer in defence of the grandmother of yesterday.

"I've no doubt it took all the moral strengthening she received on Sunday to carry her through an undiluted week of doing this and that for the family, said the upholder of the grandmother of today.

I thought of this on Wednesday, August 14, when the grandmothers put on the program at the Pine Orchard Women's Institute flitting, held at Mrs. Charles Flintoff's home, in Newmarket.

There were ten grandmothers there, but had a stranger been set down among us, would she have been able to say which were the grandmothers?

They wore no distinguishing badge—they were dressed as the season, the styles, and their own good taste dictated and they put on a splendid program.

The meeting, taken over by Mrs. Wesley Williams, at the conclusion of the business of the day, found the members indulging in some community singing—"The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Spanish Cavalier." The roll call "A funny incident of our school days" was well answered—not too late, for some of the younger members were too close to school days, to repeat the pranks that are quite vivid memories of we people who have travelled a little farther along life's pathway.

Following this, Miss Frances Edgar sang two very pretty and appropriate songs—"The Old Wooden Rocker" and "Little Old Lady." Then Mrs. Brilling, whose ancestors gave to Bogart, town its name, gave us a "History of Bogartown." It was a splendid presentation, and gave new interest to many points around Bogartown.

Many of these houses, mills, and all sorts of landmarks have disappeared now, but some still remain. The story of the school—how it came into being—the trustees, teachers and the Sunday-school once held there, were all made vivid and alive, as we listened to their story.

A tiny biography, some of the pioneer families took us back to the days when what we now call necessities, were looked upon as luxuries, and when the loyalty, perseverance, godliness and backbone of the pioneers, made possible the busy, thriving communities which dot our fair Canada, today.

It was an outstanding paper, and we hope to see it in print, that many may share our pleasure in its information.

Mrs. George Drury gave us "Current Events," with just the right mingling of hard facts, timely information and—like plums in a pudding—enough humor to give a good laugh now and again.

The meeting closed with the singing of "O Canada" and "God Save the King," after which the grandmothers showed that, though in dress and up-to-date-ness of information and interest, they are the grandmothers of today, yet in the good old-fashioned art of fine food, they were as competent as the grandmothers of yesterday.

Everyone did full justice to the good things set before them, in fact, owing to the variety and lusciousness of the cakes offered, some of us felt, we had partaken, perhaps "not wisely, but too well."

I often think that the visiting, as we partake of the "cup that cheers," is a splendid part of the meeting. We, who do not meet often, have a chance to rub up our ideas by contact with other minds and find pleasure and profit in the process.

The grandmothers meeting always has a charm of its own, and at the conclusion of the sixteenth which I have attended, I feel that more strongly than at any previous time.

They are an institution and one can look forward to another and another.

THE CHUMS INTERVIEW A PRISONER

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"Do you see that cage over there on that back veranda, with a poor lonely Canary in it?" Young Chips asked his friend, Woody Woodpecker. "I'm going to get over there to that little tree beside the veranda and talk to him. I feel so sorry for a poor bird cooped up in a cage like that. He has no freedom. I wonder if he is terribly unhappy."

"I'll come with you," said Woody. "It will be interesting to see what he has to say."

"How do you do, Mr. Canary?" Young Chips and Woody said to the yellow bird. "It must be awful to have to sit there in that cage all the time and not be able to get out into the garden. How do you stand it? I think I would go crazy."

"Oh, I'm quite used to it," answered the Canary. "I spend a lot of my time singing. I suppose it would be lovely to be free to roam out in the wide world, but it would also be full of dangers. Don't you find that?"

"Yes, but we learn to take care of ourselves, more or less," said Woody. "Of course, life in the open air is risky."

"As a matter of fact, my life is very pleasant," stated the Canary. "I am hardly ever lonely, except when everybody in the house goes out. I never have to worry about any enemies and I never have to worry about food. It's all right here beside me. My family don't even keep a cat. Out of respect for my feelings, I have never known what it is to be free to fly around, and they say that what you don't know about, you never miss."

"Then you are not a wild bird that was captured and kept prisoner?" Young Chips asked him. "Of course, you are yellow in color and very pretty too, but I understand that some birds that are captured, such as Purple Finches, Crossbills and the Pine Grosbeaks, whose adult male plumage is rosy red or dull red, lose their color when in captivity and become a ruddy yellow shade."

"That may be very true, but I am a purebred Canary, and I have never known the outside world, even when I was a baby," replied the Canary. "They put me out on the veranda in the summer a good deal and I see quite a bit of the activities of the wild birds."

"But you are a quarrelsome lot, I think," he went on. "Why, only today, I saw two Robins fighting with two Squirrels. As a matter of fact, I had made friends with the Robins, as they had their nest on the veranda. But I was certainly very surprised to see the way that they pitched into the Squirrels today. They were quarrelling about that big tree."

"The Robins think that they should have sole rights in that tree, without having any Squirrels around to bother them, and the Squirrels think otherwise," he went on. "The Robins were darting angrily at the Squirrels and the Squirrels seemed rather alarmed, but scolded back in a very understanding language. The whole affair rather disillusioned me."

"Oh, well, little things like that do happen occasionally," said Young Chips. "Some of us are a bit quarrelsome by nature, but most of us, the Chickadees, for example, are very cheery and good-natured and rarely quarrel. I am sure you would like us if you were to join our little circle."

"You seem very nice, indeed," admitted the Canary, "but I think that even if I could escape, I would prefer not to. I'm an adult now and it would be hard to change my mode of life. To tell you the truth, once, a while ago, they left my cage open by accident and I could have got out. I debated whether I should do very seriously, and decided not to go. And I was quite gratified when the family discovered what they had done and were so tickled that I had not escaped. They are very fond of me."

"Well, I certainly don't understand your point of view," said Woody, with a shake of his head. "but I guess we are all different, and the life that would please some people would not please others. It depresses me to see you so easily satisfied, with no spirit of adventure or daring."

"Well, I guess we can't persuade you that you're missing the best things in life," said Young Chips. "But if you ever should have the opportunity again to take to the open road, I think you would enjoy our life. Good-bye for now. Perhaps we'll see you again."

25 YEARS AGO

From Era file, Aug. 23, 1913

Miss Fox of Toronto spent the week with her sister, Mrs. J. H. Collins.

Mrs. C. E. Clibine and daughter have gone to Alhambra, N. Y. for a fortnight.

Rev. D. Prosser is spending a few days in Sault Ste. Marie, visiting his brother.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Schmidt are away on a two weeks' trip through American cities.

Miss Margaret Bowles of Brantford, spent last week with her cousin, Miss Rena Muir.

Miss Louise Clark, was spending a couple of days with Miss Edith Robertson at Orchard Beach last week.

Miss Margaret Sinclair of Baldwin left on Tuesday night to visit her brother at Siltan, Sask.

Hugh Evans of White Rose, brother of Mrs. Arthur Evans of Newmarket, was struck by a Metropolitan car south of Aurora on Tuesday evening. The injuries he received resulted in his death the following morning.

The foundation for the Oddfellows Hall on Lot St. is now nearing completion. No formal ceremony was held for the laying of the corner-stone, but a parchment bearing the names of the officers, committees and members of the lodge, and the officers of the grand lodge of Ontario, together with copies of the local newspapers and other matter relating to the present day were enclosed within the wall.

The account given in last week's Era regarding the double wedding which was to take place in the near future, was not true and should not have appeared. It was sent to us, and, in good faith, we published it.

The Newmarket Homing Pigeon club held another race on Monday, from Huntsville. Stan Osborne won first with Black Joe, who came home in three hours, five minutes. As there were no other birds who came home that night, no second prize was given.

W. H. Eves has built a new coal shed alongside the track at the G. T. R. depot.

Another car of fine horses from Scotland arrived in town last week for John A. Boag of Queensville.

Toronto Exhibition opens tomorrow.

The Parisian Laundry lost a valuable horse on Tuesday evening. The animal had only been working for a few days. It was worth $175.

For the past few nights millions of shooting stars in the northeastern skies have furnished one of the most wonderful astronomical phenomena of the year. It was the annual August shower and while not of a very dense nature, was clearly visible to all who looked.

The apparatus for boring another artesian well for the town arrived here on Monday morning. The men are placing it in position on the east end of Coffer St.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's brother, Robert J. Riechbrough, Newtonbrook, when Miss Harriet W. Riechbrough was united in marriage to Mr. Walter R. Stephens of Newmarket. Rev. Edward Baker officiated.

50 YEARS AGO

From Era file, Aug. 21, 1888

Mr. Isaac Shupe of Moose Jaw, N. W. T., arrived in town last week.

Mrs. Banting of Brandon, Man., sister of Rev. L. W. Hill, was visiting here last week.

Miss Lizzy Moore of Yonge street is spending a couple of weeks in Muskoka with Miss Cody.

Mr. Wm. Riddell of Moose Jaw is in town this week, buying horses for the North-West.

Mrs. John Allen accompanied the party from Newmarket who left on the New York excursion last week.

Mrs. N. J. Roadhouse and her sister, Miss Millard, are spending six weeks at Orillia and Gravenhurst.

Miss Estelle Thompson, a graduate of Fort Wayne Conservatory of music, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Lucinda Morton.

Mr. J. G. Hutchcraft of Ottawa, a former Newmarket boy, who worked on The Era staff, is spending a week or ten days in town visiting old friends.

Miss Ellen Cody has been engaged to teach one of the departments in the town school at Sault Ste. Marie, making her home with her sister, Mrs. Robert Rush.

Slates and pencils will soon be the order of the day again. School starts next week, so no doubt many of the town's small boys will be wishing that the holidays were just starting.

On Friday evening the town band occupied the platform at the head of Lot street and gave another delightful out-door concert.

The old Pump Factory, on the corner of Prospect avenue and Lydla street, occupied for a number of years by Mr. Penrose, has been torn down, preparatory to grading the lot for Mr. J. J. Pearson's new brick house. Thus another of the town's landmarks are gone.

The annual illumination of David's Temple and September Feast of the Children of Peace at Sharon is announced to take place next week.

The holidays are waning, please parties are drawing to a close and the nights are getting longer. Harvest homes are in order. Threshing has commenced, and it will soon be apple paring time, instead of swinging on the front gate or walking under the shady trees. Such are the changes of life.

Every season John Rogers of Yonge street has a test at threshing, but for the fun of seeing how lively the boys' step around. On Thursday Robert McChurche's machine threshed 1,000 bushels of barley in six hours.

In Eden

"Eavesdropping again!" asked Adam as his wife fell out of a tree.

Commander Frank Hawks, air-speed ace, holder of a Canadian title, died in Buffalo Tuesday night from injuries received in a crash at East Aurora, N. Y.

Controller Fred Hamilton proposed a complete reorganization of the existing Toronto city hall administration, on Tuesday night, with the position of City Manager being created and offered to the Mayor.

From Budapest on Tuesday came the news that a German diplomat who refused to be quoted declared that "Hungary will have to decide soon between Bled and Berlin."

A tornado swept across ten townships in the Thunder Bay district on Tuesday and demolished buildings, killed cattle and uprooted trees by hundreds, cut off telephone connections with the States for hours. It was the first tornado known in this area.

The Dionne quintuplets were shown to visitors for the first time since Aug. 5, when they became ill with throat trouble, on Tuesday morning. Rain forced them to remain indoors but they waved to on-lookers from a nursery window.

Trading church bells for switch engine bells, R. T. Foster of Oklahoma City was married in his father's engine on Monday. He wanted his father to witness his marriage but Papa Foster couldn't get a day off.

Mayor Day admitted Tuesday night that not one of the successful Millar will winners had paid back even a five-cent piece to the city for relief and hospitalization received. He said, however, that he believed that the whole matter will be satisfactorily adjusted soon.

Trading church bells for switch engine bells, R. T. Foster of Oklahoma City was married in his father's engine on Monday. He wanted his father to witness his marriage but Papa Foster couldn't get a day off.

PETS AND PESTS

By DELPHINIUM

A slight change in the arrangement of the letters and "pets" become a "pest."

For example, our hens, who are great pets, take advantage of this to become pests. Hens and gardens do not do well together.

Try to keep the hens out of the garden, and not shut them up, and they'll find a way over or under. Early in the season they would scratch up the plants or go around nipping pieces out of the young cabbage and cauliflower plants. More recently, they have devoured the best ears of two lots of early corn.

The early corn seems to be within their reach, or perhaps they like the exercise of jumping up at the formed ears. They tear down the husks in ragged shreds, eating out the kernels as they find them. The corn did not look quite ready to me, but the hens knew better, and I found the ears the hens tackled were well formed. So those hens became, instead of pets, pests.

Then the garden has too much livestock in it. The air is full of butterflies and birds. This sounds poetical, but the butterflies are the white or yellow ones that fly over the different varieties of the cabbage family and deposit their eggs there. Possibly the birds know about them and are after the eggs or young worms. I do not see them at them, but the beautiful butterflies are pests.

"There's a caterpillar on your shoulder," said a neighbor, brushing it off. "I don't mind a caterpillar, but I would a great green tomato worm, and a potato bug was resting contentedly on my dress this morning. There seems to be pests for everything."

A few days ago while working in the garden, three pillars of cloud kept dancing over some of the plants. They were minute gnats or very small organisms. I clapped a lot dead between my hands, but they were too small to examine, and yet they were having their little day, and doing no good, I'll warrant.

Where do the great green tomato worms stay between seasons? I suppose they change into other forms. It would be a huge butterfly if they go into that state. They certainly are ugly.

Even the familiar potato bug is a very great pest. Do you remember when it was called the Colorado Potato Beetle? Had they a beginning in Colorado? They probably ruined the potato crops and perpetuated their kind, before more man knew how to cope with this new pest, and so from Colorado they passed from state to state and into Canada.

"The potatoes need spraying!" I must attend to them tomorrow. But do not wait till tomorrow if you can do something at them today for if the young bugs are on the potatoes, they are very voracious and will soon leave only stalks.

On the shores of Georgian Bay I have seen potato bugs being swished by the waves, and I wondered whether the bugs have come from another shore or were down for a drink. They seem

CHURCHES

UNION SERVICES

The union services of the Christian and United churches will be held in Trinity United church on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.
Rev. J. A. Haw, B.A., will conduct both services. Mr. Haw spent many years in the west before returning to Ontario. He is now at Eganville, Ont.

GLENVILLE CHURCH SCENE OF WEDDING

Glenville United church was the scene of an interesting wedding last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Miss Leona Isabelle Dunsath, only daughter of Mr. E. Dunsath of Thornhill was united in marriage to Mr. Roy W. Keffer, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Keffer of Glenville. Rev. J. W. Holmes of Goodwood officiated and the wedding music was played by Mr. S. E. Somerville.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of ivory satin and lace with shoulder length veil of tulle and carried a bouquet of American beauty roses.

Miss Caroline Crispin of Windsor, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid, was gown in Alice blue lace and carried talisman roses. Mary Eileen Somerville was flower girl and wore rose taffeta and net with poke bonnet and carried a nosegay of sweet-heart roses and snapdragons.

The best man was Mr. James Allan and the ushers were Messrs. Lorne Keffer and George Wray. During the signing of the register, Misses Irene and Laurene Keffer sang "I love you truly."

A reception was held afterward at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Somerville, cousins of the bride, where a buffet luncheon was served to 115 guests.

Later the bride and groom left for a motor trip to Detroit, the bride travelling in a brown crepe frock, brown hat and accessories. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Glenville.

FORMER RESIDENT OF SCOTT PASSES

Mawer, Sask., and community were thrown into a feeling of deepest gloom when the sad news was spread that Mrs. J. E. Peterman passed away early Saturday morning.

While Mrs. Peterman had been ailing for some time, she retired Friday night as usual but apparently grew worse in the night and passed quietly away.

Funeral services were held from her farm home, near Mawer, and the remains buried in Rose Dale cemetery, Moose Jaw.

Mrs. Peterman was born in the township of Scott, Ont., in 1861 and in 1882 she married J. E. Peterman. They made their home near Newmarket until 1908 when they moved west and settled on a homestead in the Mawer district, where she has resided ever since. Her husband died in January, 1937.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. S. J. Doane of Sharon, Mrs. John Spring of Mawer, Sask., Mrs. C. Dunham of Aurora, and Mrs. H. Clarke, Newmarket, and one brother, Edward Strasser, Queensville. Six sons also survive, Henry, Joseph, Milton, James of Mawer, Sask., George of Omaha, Neb., and Louis of Spalding, Sask., also one daughter, Mrs. E. J. Munroe, of Rhinbeck, N. Y.

The Adventist choir of Tuganoke rendered a special anthem "There's No Disappointment in Heaven," and Mrs. A. Menzie sang Mrs. Peterman's old favorite, "The Old Rugged Cross."

Many floral tributes were received from friends as well as the community, Ladies' Aid, and W. C. T. U.

The pallbearers were W. R. Gibbie, J. F. Grant, C. R. Wilkie, S. R. Watkins, T. A. Munroe and C. Beck.

CARD OF THANKS

On behalf of the Newmarket Lions Club, as Chairman of the Carnival, I wish to thank all the people who attended our Carnival and gave freely of their money to make this the best Carnival we have ever had, and makes it possible to carry on our work for the needy children.

I also wish to thank the Heads of the factories, the Merchants and cartage men for their co-operation, and all others who helped.

F. T. Courtney.

Earning His Bill
A fond father went to a school to see what progress his son was making. In response to his inquiry the principal said: "Your son will probably go down in history."

"That's good news," glowed the parent.
The principal lifted his eyebrows, and continued: "But he might do better in geography and the other subjects."

The plumber was working and his new assistant was looking on. The latter was learning the trade and this was his first day.
"Say," he inquired, "does the boss charge for my time?"
"Certainly," was the reply.
"But I haven't done anything."
"The plumber had been inspecting the finished job with a lighted candle, which he handed to his helper. "Here," he said, "if you've got to be so conscientious, blow that out!"

LIVED HERE LONG AGO, 60 YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Case of Edmonton, residents of Newmarket many years ago, celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary last month. They were married on July 23, 1878.

A family party, arranged by their granddaughter, Mrs. J. L. Archibald of Winnipeg, who was visiting them, marked the anniversary occasion. Their son and daughter, Colin and Dodo, nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren were present. Their daughter, Iona, who lives in Kalispell, Montana, was unable to be present. Mr. and Mrs. Case returned but three weeks prior to the anniversary day from a visit to her.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Case were born in Uxbridge, and resided in Newmarket and Mount Albert for many years. It is 33 years since they went to Edmonton.

Hard and hearty, finding many enjoyable tasks to fill each minute of the day, they find time passing swiftly. They both enjoy car riding, while Mrs. Case has her sewing, embroidery and rug-making to occupy any idle moments, and Mr. Case likes working in the out-of-doors, in his vegetable garden and among his flowers, which picturesquely surround the charming little bungalow home built by Mr. Case.

This month, another anniversary falls. Mrs. Case will celebrate her 80th birthday. Mr. Case, 84, is the only brother living in a family of 10. Mrs. Dora Haystead, now of Aurora, who lived in Newmarket until a year ago, is the only remaining sister. There are many nieces, nephews, and cousins living around Newmarket. Miss Ruby Case and Clarence Case of Newmarket, Jack and Walter Case of Mount

Foundry Chances Spoilt By Fifth Inning Break-Down

Tanners Take Sixth Win In Town League Ball By 25 — 8 Score

Pitching in aggressive style, "Joint" McComb, tannery heaver, limited the foundry hitters to six scattered hits on Monday night to help boost his mates to their sixth win of the season, proving to fans that they are the likely holders of the town league title this year. The final score was 25-8.

George Wilson pitched excellent ball for the losers but the fifth inning proved to be a heart-breaker. With two out in this session, and the bases loaded, an infield error turned an easy third "out" into the beginning of an 11-run hitting spree from which the iron men never recovered.

The foundry scored first as Anthony crossed the plate after a safe hit, and a steal following a caught fly by Wilson. The tanners came to the front in their half as McComb tripled to bring in Ray and Wilf White and Ferguson after safe hits. Brown homered with McComb on to end the scoring in this frame.

The skin-game boys continued their winning ways in the next inning. Kidd singled, to score on Hodgins' safety. Ferguson lined one to arrive safely on first. Hodgins went out on a steal to third, but R. White got to first. Smith doubled, scoring White and Ferguson.

Atkinson bunted safely in the foundry's third inning and scored on Anthony's triple, with Anthony crossing the plate on an error. Wilson held the tannery scoreless, and both teams scored four runs in the fourth inning, giving the tannery a 12-7 lead.

Six errors brought a headache to the foundry team and 11 runs for the tanners. The iron men failed to tally in the sixth while the tanners whipped in two more when Ferguson tripled with Kidd and Hodgins on bases. Anthony scored again in the seventh for the foundry's only further tally.

Anthony, Wilson and Yates were tops for the losers and never stopped trying, while each and every one of the tanners starred as one, with McComb's hurling outstanding.

Teams — Tannery: Hodgins, Ferguson, B. White, W. White, Smith, McComb, Brown, Bertonshaw, Kidd.

Foundry: Anthony, Wilson, Cook, Gardner, Whipperman, Yates, Atkinson, Hadfield and A. White.

Umpires: Bone and Pattenden.

ABOUT TOWN

HAIL, BRUNO!

Just in case our neighbors on Connaught Avenue are worrying, we rush into print with the information that the black and white animal which haunts our home is not a skunk.

It's Bruno. Bruno came to us last week with name and colors already attached, and he is a dog. In fact, he is quite a lot of dog. We found that out when first we took him for a walk. We mean when first Bruno took us for a walk — we mean a run.

It's a little difficult to explain, but with Bruno on one end of a leash and ourselves on the other, confusion is a natural result. One of us was pulled off our feet, and it wasn't Bruno.

Bruno — we might just as well get this off our chest — is a city dog. As might be expected of a Torontonian, he is a little reserved in manner and a little dazed in expression. A drink of Aurora's crystal-clear water, a stroll down Aurora's park-like avenues, and a pleasant shopping trip through Aurora's business section, however, changed all that.

Bruno is a new dog. There's a joyous spring to his stride and a happier lilt to his bark. His eyes, as they rove over the petunia beds, shine with an appreciation of things rural. Even the butcher boys taste better in Aurora, Bruno finds.

HAIL, US!

Aurora has made a change in us, too. It's just about a year since this page and this column came into existence. Explaining the reason for this at that time, we stated: "The primary purpose of a newspaper is to publish news — news of people, places and merchants. That is the purpose of The Aurora Era. To our present readers in Aurora and Newmarket and their respective districts we offer a better coverage than we have been able to give them before."

"Our new readers in Aurora will find herein every bit of Aurora news we've been able to get our teeth into. In addition to Aurora news you will find news of your uncle in Newmarket, your Keswick and Kettleby cousins, your Mount Albert mother-in-law, your Sutton and Schomberg sisters, and your friends in King, Sharon, Pine Orchard, and . . . well, look over the paper and see for yourself. You'll find in it the largest news coverage of any weekly newspaper in the county."

That sounded like a bit of bragging then, but reading it over a year later, we are not inclined to apologize. We believe The Era in its Aurora-Newmarket and district news, stands second to no other paper.

A good newspaper does not need to apologize for its existence in any community. The twin communities of Aurora and Newmarket are as alert and progressive as any in Ontario, and they cannot be properly served by anything less than an alert and progressive newspaper.

This page has performed no miracles in the past year. This column has failed to set the town afire. But within the fire department and out, it has managed to find a few more readers each week. We are thankful for that.

Having lived in Aurora for a year, we are thankful for many things. We have found friends, a pleasant place in which to work, and have been given a much-appreciated opportunity to share in the community life of the town. We're glad.

We've tried to help in town activities and have enjoyed the privilege. We have not presumed to lead, but have given support to those who have the qualities of leadership. We take credit for solving no problems, but we've tried to give you the thoughts of those who had their solution in mind.

We've received few cheers and deserved still less. We have, however, received a number of handshakes, and whether we deserve them or not, we're thankful. We hope things are going well with you, too.

Supports Move For Reduced Freight Rates For Farmers

Would Help Ontario Grain Growers, Elton Armstrong Believes

Warm praise of the action taken by Hon. P. M. Dewar, in supporting the plea of the Ontario farmer for equitable freight rates, was voiced this week by Elton Armstrong, president of the Aurora Agricultural Society.

"The Ontario farmer has been the forgotten man of Canada so far as the railways and federal authorities are concerned in this issue," Mr. Dewar stated recently. "He pays 21 cents for the freight service which the western farmers, American farmers and Argentine corn-growers get for 13 cents, and in some cases using exactly the same railway facilities, as low as seven cents."

In a letter written to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Dewar pointed out that Ontario farmers should have a fixed price for wheat if the western farmers received it.

OPEN TENNIS TOURNEY GETS GOOD START

Over 60 entries have been received for the open tournament sponsored by the Aurora Tennis Club this week. Keith Davis stated today. The list includes players from Toronto, Barrie, Uxbridge, Penetang, Allandale and Clarendon and bristles with such bright names as those of Maurice Margesson, northern Ontario champion, C. Hopper, Winnipeg star, Bill Pearson of Vancouver, J. Havelicek of Czechoslovakia, Al Wilson, C. N. R. champion, and "Ollie" Olsen, leading Birchcliffe player.

Fans and players alike will have an opportunity of seeing sparkling tennis for the balance of the week, with some super-play on Saturday. Tickets sold for the exhibition bout which was previously rained out will be honored on Saturday, Mr. Davis said.

Keith Davis and "Wink" Barnard came through with a hard-earned victory over Johnston and M. Hanna Wednesday in the feature match of the Aurora open tennis tournament, winning the three-set match, 1-6, 12-10, 8-6. Results of other games were as follows:

PINE ORCHARD DIES 3 DAYS EARLY 79TH BIRTHDAY

PAYS VISIT TO BAKERY

Andrew Hunter, of a bakery supply firm in Belfast, Ireland, made a special trip to Aurora last week to inspect the plant of the Seanson bakery.

"I might also point out that the export rate on Ontario wheat flour is now 21 cents per cwt., while the rate on western shipments is only 13 cents," Mr. Dewar's letter stated. "Is it fair that the Ontario farmer should be discriminated against in both the matter of price and freight rates?"

"The freight rate on flour should be reduced, even if they raise the rate of by-products," Elton Armstrong stated. "We can use the by-products here."

Farmers last winter in many cases paid more for their feeds, which could have been obtained from flour by-products, than they had received for the wheat itself, he pointed out.

VANDORF MEET IS ATTENDED BY TWENTY-TWO

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Freeman Allen Wednesday of last week with an attendance of 22. For the benefit of those unable to be present, the members are to piece a quilt block — prints or gingham — to be 12 inches when finished with nine blocks to each square.

Cut each block four and a half inches to allow for seams and arrange so that the dark blocks are in the corners. Members are asked to have these ready for the next meeting if possible.

Vandorf school fair is to be held Monday, Sept. 19.

Mrs. A. van Nostrand read a very concise paper on the "New Course of Study" in schools, which should help all to do more thinking and have a better understanding of the new trend of education.

Another interesting feature of the day came when Mrs. C. Moynihan was given a vase as a reward for answering every roll call but one last year, the best record of any member.

Miss Ann Elliott, Miss Evelyn O'Dell of Willowdale and Miss Nora Power of Windsor were recent guests of Miss Eulaline Kingdon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford King and children, Marilyn, Florence, and Samuel, of Scotland, are visiting the Switzer family.

Miss Jean Switzer and Mr. and Mrs. King spent a few days in Haliburton county.

Mrs. W. A. McDonald is seriously ill in York county hospital.

Mrs. Cale delivered an excellent address at Wesley church on Sunday.

Miss Una Martin of Aurora has been visiting Miss Jean Willis.

Extra Innings Needed When Iron Men Nose Out Towners

Foundry Squad Backs Up Wilson's Hurling To Win 16 — 15

After losing steadily all season, Lloyd Cowieson's foundry softball team ended the year in a blaze of glory by nosing out the highly-touted towners by a one-run margin on Wednesday night.

An extra inning was necessary before the iron men got the 16-15 verdict. The towners scored a run in their half of the extra inning, to tie it up, 16-16, but batting out of turn cost them the game.

A rejuvenated foundry team played almost errorless behind the super-hurling of George Wilson, and by the end of the first inning they had a 4-0 lead. Yates singled and scored on Cook's liner, and Cook came home on Wilson's triple with Neilly walking to first. Benville tripled with two on to complete the inning.

In the second, the foundry added to their lead with runs by Yates, Cook and Wilson. The town scored four runs off five hits in the end of the second inning, and the foundry came back in the third when Anthony scored on Atkinson's double, to give them a total of eight. The town team got its fifth run when Ted Yates hit.

Heaney singled, and came home on hits by Lloyd and McDonald. Benville again tripled for the foundry in the fourth, scoring Neilly, but the town came back to tie it up, 9-9. Five foundry hits by White, Atkinson, Yates, Hadfield, Wilson and Benville gave the iron men a 14-9 lead.

The town fought hard for three runs in their half of the fifth as Wes. Heaney poled a homer, H. Sutton crossed the plate on Ted Heaney's triple. Both teams failed to score in the sixth. The foundry clicked once in the seventh and the town chalked up three to tie the game, and the decision went to the iron men when Atkinson came home on Yates's hit.

Expect Fifty Ace Cyclists To Meet On Cousins' Track

Aurora Cycling Club Will Sponsor Labor Day Bicycle Races

Over 50 outstanding Canadian cyclists are expected to compete in the bicycle race meet to be held at Cousins' track on Labor day, it was learned this week. The meet is sponsored by the Aurora Cycling Club and it has received the sanction of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association.

The feature of the meet is an unlimited pursuit race. Four two-man teams, to be selected by the referee, will take part. They will be stationed at points one-eighth of a mile apart on the half mile track.

When the starting gun is fired, the teams will start simultaneously on a grind, the object of which is to pass all the other teams which are not themselves passed. When one team overtakes another, the team overtaken drops out. This race is expected to produce some stiff pedalling.

The unlimited miss and out race is also expected to provide the spectators who will be admitted free, with some lively excitement. In this race the last man to cross the starting line on each lap drops out.

A girls' exhibition half-mile race is another interesting item on the program.

A half mile open-lap race, a one mile junior boys' race, roadster bicycles, and a one mile race, open to Aurora and vicinity, complete the program.

Entry blanks can be secured from John Offord or George Spence, Aurora.

Towners Come From Behind To Beat Shoemakers, 18-12

Lustic, Sisman Hurler, Slumps To Give Town Fifth Win

With four straight victories under their belts, the town team added another in the town league ball game played on Friday. It was obtained at the expense of the faltering shoemakers, who went down to defeat 18-12, under a barrage of base hits.

The Sisman squad threatened only once, in the third inning, when they led, 9-5. Lustic, who has been doing some fine hurling for the shoemakers, had a bad night. He walked 11 players, and was hit freely.

Bill Bone, town heaver, allowed two free tickets while pitching his best game of the season. Errors were plentiful, though evenly distributed, each club making four misplays.

The towners opened their attack early with Heaney, Sutton, Pattenden and Bone making it 4-0 in the first inning. The shoemakers got three in the second to the town team's singleton, and continued their aggressive style in the third to turn the score to 9-5 in their favor.

The town tied it up again when they came to bat and held the shoemakers scoreless in the next inning. Then they turned on the heat again and batted out an even half dozen to make it 15-9. The margin remained the same at the end of the game, each team bringing in another three runs.

Cy and Len Holman, and McMain got credit for home runs. Herb McKenzie starred at first base for the losers and hit safely in three out of four attempts, as did the two Holmans. The winners were paced by Bone, B. Pattenden and the Heaneys.

Teams—Town: W. Heaney, McMain, Sutton, B. Pattenden, Bone, McDonald, Lloyd, Mugford and T. Heaney.

Shoemakers: Broom, Barnard,

McGee, Lustic, McKenzie, P. Pattenden, C. Holman, Milne, L. Holman.

Umpires: W. White and B. Anthony.

She believed the only way to hold a man was down.—Lee Shippey.

TOWN LEAGUE STANDING

Only two games are needed to complete the town league softball schedule. The tanners take on the shoemakers on Friday and on Monday the tanners clash with the town.

could graduate into the large room, we had to say from memory all the books of the Bible, the Lord's Prayer, the Apostles' Creed and the 23rd Psalm. This was a stiff program for seven-year-olds, especially before a committee of strange men, but we did it.

The girls then went into the class of a charming widow, Mrs. Ambrose Cane. Her patience was untiring, and she was as even-tempered as I remember her daughter, Francie, to have been. Next we were promoted to the class taught by Miss Ella Urquhart, (Mrs. John Brimmon). We learned a great deal from this sweet and amiable teacher, at a time when we were just a bunch of squirming little girls.

Under the supervision of J. P. Belfry, a handsome white-haired man, we had "experience" meetings about once a month, after Sunday-school. I recall the thrill and excitement of getting to one's feet to recite a Bible verse.

When Sunday-school was dismissed we passed out of the front doors in the basement, or went back to the library department, all in orderly lines, singing as we went "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." It meant so much and the singing was so hearty. Other favorite hymns were "How Sweet the Call of Mercy," from Crossley and Hunter's book, "He is the Lily of the Valley," "There's a Stranger at the Door," "Beulah Land," "Marching to Zion," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

That Sunday-school was full of adults as well as children. L. G. Jackson had a class of young men. When Mr. Belfry moved to Orillia, Mr. Jackson became Sunday-school superintendent. The Jackson family were a mainstay of the Methodist church.

Erastus Jackson, a venerable looking white-bearded gentleman, loved to tease the children just a little bit. His wife was always very well dressed in stiff silk, with long gold ear rings. His daughter, Clara (Mrs. Harper) played the organ in church and Sunday-school, and another daughter, Eva, sang in the choir. L. G. Jackson was very popular as superintendent, seeming to understand children so well. In nice weather, right after Sunday-school, he took his wife and three boys, Edgar, Walter and Leslie out driving behind two spirited little black ponies. How I envied them those ponies.

The older boys and girls took a stroll out to the cemetery and back, but I had to go straight home. We were not even allowed to touch the organ on Sunday, except to sing hymns, because my dad did not have any ear for music and he was afraid sister Sadie might be playing secular tunes.

The Christmas Entertainment

Before passing on to the Christmas entertainment it might be well to mention some of the other men and women who helped build up the Methodist church and Sunday-school. At that time, Rev. L. W. Hill was the pastor, succeeded by Rev. Jos. Odery. The Cane family were very prominent in church work. Chas. M. Hughes, wife and boys, Cane, Sr., and his son, Henry, wife and boys, Howard and Lawrence; David Lloyd, town clerk, with his wife and family; Chas. M. Hughes, wife and boys.

Mrs. Hughes had a class of boys in the Sunday-school. The large Montgomery family, with plenty of boys, and two daughters, Mrs. Robt. Brimmon and Mrs. Brodie. Then also there was the Reesor family, the Phillips family, from Yonge St. and several families of Millards (John, Brooks, Robert) and the Roadhouse family. Among the young ladies were Maude and Bert Wallace, Annie Gartley, the Urquhart girls, the Manning girls, and many others.

Mrs. Henry Cane, Mrs. C. M. Hughes and my mother were among the charter members of the W. C. T. U. in Newmarket. (Mother was afterward county president, W. C. T. U.)

About Christmas time the excitement in Sunday-school was intense, because we were putting on the annual Christmas cantata. So many evenings and Saturday afternoons were given over to practising for the big event in the town hall. The cantata always wound up with Santa Claus coming out of a big red brick chimney and distributing candy, and maybe an orange to each member.

Lyman Jackson was the chief executive and had his hands more than full, even with all the teachers assisting, and helpers such as Jack and Charlie Montgomery, Bolt, Hewitt, Edgar Bogart, etc.

For me, the Christmas entertainment was the cause of a yearly struggle to get off my winter underwear and into a summer white dress "to speak my piece." As I was subject to colds we compromised usually by pinning up the underwear sleeves out of sight, and squeezing last summer's slippers on over heavy wool "cashmere" stockings, (we wore home knitted ones to school). But nothing could dim that night, performing to a packed house of admiring relatives and long suffering friends, and being "shooed" off and on the stage at the proper time by our worn-out instructors.

Before we speak of the annual Sunday-school excursion, let me tell of other things not as pleasant but very exciting, such as the time Reesor's grist mill burned and out of his despair Mr. Reesor took to the idea of an electric light plant, which was very successful. The family moved to Lindsay where he operated a similar plant.

In those days the Reesor boys had to go around the town every day, lower the street light to the centre of the road, by a rope, then take out the burned pencil—like stick of carbon—and insert a new one. The old ones were in great demand to heat over a lamp and curl the bangs of the ladies with.

When Cane's factory caught on fire it made your breath hard to get, it meant so much to so many men in Newmarket. Once, when the fire engine could not pump water fast enough, those present formed a bucket brigade and even my two sisters (Jule was alive then) and other girls helped fill them were exhausted.

Worse than all, was the unsolved murder of a merchant, Robt. Smith. My blood used to run cold to think of it at night. That evening we had the then famous reciter, Jessie Alexander, at the town hall. Robert was to join his wife and sister at the concert. He did not appear and when they went to hunt for him at his home adjoining the store they found him shot to death. He had been murdered while in the basement attending to the furnace.

The Annual Excursion

The annual Sunday-school excursion was the highlight of the summer. It was usually held at Lake Simcoe resorts, principally Big Bay Point. Once it was held at Toronto Island, but the Newmarket merchants did not like that for it gave people a chance to shop in Toronto on a cheap fare. However, nearly every merchant closed his store and went on the picnic, it usually being an affair of two or three churches.

The night before the picnic we scholars all went to the Sunday-school room, were identified if necessary, and were handed a ticket, either free or at a very nominal price. On my first visit back, I was tickled beyond all measure to have Mr. Jackson say "Why surely Katie is a member of this Sunday-school."

How we watched the sky, but I never remember it to rain so hard we did not get started. After we once got away it did not matter. The special train was there on the siding very early, but it seemed an eternity before it pulled up to the depot. Then came the scramble trying to get loose from mother's hand to get on and "keep a seat" for my parents.

Sadie, my older sister, would be off with her own friends. Usually we went as far as Barrie by train, then took the old tubs, the "Enterprise" or the "Orillia" (some thought one was safer than the other) across Lake Simcoe, or up the bay to Big Bay Point, which was my preference.

There we had to make a call on Wellie Bogart, our town photographer, who had a summer gallery at the Point. Even yet, as I look at some of his photos, I admire his skill at photography.

One time we left the train at Bradford and embarked there, following the Holland River in all its windings into Lake Simcoe. This was before the Jacks-sons or others had built summer homes at Orchard Beach.

For the picnic the young ladies had bought cheap white "chip" straw hats and trimmed them with colored bunting. These were very pretty with their summer dresses. The young men wore "blazer" coats in striped flannel, navy and light blue, red and blue, etc. The committee had an ornate badge.

Each family took its own basket, and ate in small groups, not forgetting to look out for any youngsters who might have come with meagre lunches. When I think of all the china we used to lug along I wonder our parents ever went on a picnic. There was usually a large wash boiler of hot water and one dipped out a pitcher full and put the tea, in a cloth, into the pitcher. That was for the elders. We wanted lemonade, and never missed the ice, as we were not used to it.

After eating, heavy was the hand on any child who ventured in bathing before two hours had gone by. As it was the only time all season most of us had to go in the water, little girls just wore an old cotton dress and knickers to go bathing. Then we had to dress hurriedly behind some bushes to get ready for "the races." Once I took two first prizes at running, so then I was politely asked not to compete any more that year.

Coming home on the train, I noticed a good many of the badges were now being worn by the young ladies, I suppose as a sign of manly interest. The only time I ever was glad I lived anywhere near the depot was when the train arrived there, with me half asleep, and I had to shuffle through the dust to "Charlotte Ave."

My memory of the Presbyterian church is not as vivid, but I do remember Rev. J. W. Bell and his family, in fact I visited there on my first trip back in 1893, I went to get my dog which he had kept for me. A year or so after that, Mr. Bell came to call on us at St. Catharines, and "Towser" was overjoyed to see him, so much so, that we had to shut the dog in the kitchen.

However, Towser was a wise pup, and he ran up the back stairs and down the front ones and right into Mr. Bell's lap, much to our embarrassment. Before this I had thought of him as I saw him in the pulpit, austere and very spiritual, now he seemed so human. His old mother came to church, but she would not sing from the hymnal, but sang softly to herself from

EVERSLEY ICE CREAM SOCIAL IS GREAT SUCCESS

Miss E. Tinline, Eversley's beloved 90-year-old lady has been ill with a cold. Under the capable nursing of Mrs. McWhitt, she is able to be around again, though gaining strength very slowly.

King's oldest grand old lady, Mrs. Glass, who is 96 years of age, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles Nell of Eversley, for a while. She is as bright as ever.

Rev. M. E. Burch was home for church service on Sunday, after three weeks of holidays, which he spent in the north, going from North Bay to Killarney and to the mountains of Killarney.

Mrs. Mudge spent last week at Scott's Wha Hae, the guest of Miss Ferguson. This week she is in Toronto. Her daughter, Margot, Mrs. Ernest Barker and Mr. Barker, who is a rising young artist, are spending a month with Mrs. Barker's sister, Mrs. Gunn, at Jarvis' on the Humber, west of King City, where Mr. Barker is busy with his art.

The community was glad to see both of them at the Y. P. S. social on Friday night. Mrs. Cairns had been in Detroit with her daughter, Marjory, Mrs. Gillham, for some time.

the metrical version of the Psalms. (Since I have married a Scotch Presbyterian, I can appreciate the beauty of the psalms, as they are sung.) Mr. Dickson, the high school principal at that time, was an ardent Presbyterian, also his family and Mr. Prettie and family, Amos Wilson and family, Col. Allan, Mrs. Binns and her family, Mrs. Hartry and daughters, Miss H. Morton, Messrs. Oliver and Ratcliffe and families, and others whom I should remember.

During this period of time Dr. Bentley died. He was the beloved doctor of the town and surrounding country. His sister, Mrs. Greenwood, and her two children, Jack and Constance, lived with him, almost across from the residence of T. H. Brunton. Dr. Bentley gave me my first vaccination, which still shows so that I have never had to have another. He had his office in his drug store, well down Main St. toward the south end. As his pharmacist he had Stuart McClelland, who married my sister's friend, Ella Roadhouse. They moved to Illinois.

Other stores at that time were Brooks Millard's sewing machine agency at the corner of Main and Timothy. Across from him was the Forsythe House. Diagonally across from him was the store of the Robert Smith, whose sad death I have spoken about. Next to Smith was the store kept as a dry goods and millinery by Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hughes. A few doors above that was Playter's store.

Across Main St. was a line of stores, I cannot say just how they came as to order, but there was Bailey's Bakery, Roche's store (afterward Julius Mader's store), Brunton Bros. These were general stores, the farmer women taking butter and eggs there, and taking the amount out in trade.

Along there somewhere was the shoe repair shop of Mr. Montgomery, Sr. Norris once kept a book store along there. Mr. Watson, the jeweller, was near the post office. Wellington Bogart had his photo studio on the corner of Main St. across from the old registry office. The post office and the "Era" offices are just where I remember them. Mr. Jos. Stephens kept the north end grocery on the town line, and his wife, who had a beautiful voice, sang in the Methodist church choir.

Byron Oliver was one of the town's famous musicians, and he had gone to Germany to study piano. I also remember visiting at the home of the ill-fated Saxon sisters, and hearing a hair-raising account of how those two girls routed a burglar and then marched up to Chief of Police Savage on Main St. to notify him. While they did this, the men had looted the jewelry store across the way from Mr. Savage, and made their escape on a fast freight.

One of our first callers in St. Catharines was the late Dean Harris, formerly of Newmarket Roman Catholic church. He had a grand physique, and great dynamic force. Strange to say, he was followed there by Dean Morris, also from Newmarket.

Just a word about the Newmarket lacrosse team, as they were in 1897. Once in a while they played the St. Catharines team. There was always a Doyle on it, and Bob Manning was another star player. At any rate I nearly got thrown out of the grandstand by the St. Catharines crowd for shouting for the Newmarket boys. I guess Newmarket gets into the blood, or I should not be running on like this, because people say it is a sign of age when one goes back to the past too much.

I came up the other day to see the place where my parents and my sister Jule are buried. The graves were well kept and the whole cemetery shows care. It seemed to me a peaceful spot to await the resurrection.

MISS LYDIA LOVE, AGED 88 YEARS, WHO HAS BEEN LIVING WITH MR. GEORGE COURTNEY ON THE CORNER OF THE 8TH OF KING, DIED ON SUNDAY, AUGUST 22ND, AT KING CITY CEMETERY ON TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

On Sabbath a week ago, Miss A. A. Ferguson attended the morning service in Richmond Hill Presbyterian church. Rev. J. D. Cunningham and family were on vacation and the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Dr. Forbes. Dr. Forbes, one of the pioneer missionaries in the Peace River district, came from Scotland as a young man.

After long years in the west, organizing congregations and building up churches, he came to Sutton, where he ministered till he retired a few years ago. He and Mrs. Forbes visited in Scotland and are now living in Toronto where Dr. Forbes continues to supply pulpits.

Anyone passing Eversley Presbyterian church on Friday night would be interested in the lawn social which was in progress. This was the monthly activity of the Y.P.S. and was under the leadership of a very capable executive, namely, Misses Edith Eovalt and Verna Bovair.

It was an ice cream social, and the guests sat at tables on the lawn and ate cake and ice cream, drank lemonade and visited.

Later in the church, a delightful musical entertainment was given, with Mrs. Chas. Egan, president, as chairlady.

Those who gave generously and acceptably of their talent were Stanley Fletcher, from Eaton Hall farm, who played selections on his piano accordion, Mr. Walsh, whose English concertina gives out wonderful melodies, gave several selections, ending with a good imitation of church chimes. Leslie McLaughlin, a farm hand with a musical soul, gave mouth organ selections and a cow boy song, accompanied by a guitar.

Rev. Alvin Cherry, a guest of Miss Phillips Egan, gave a piano solo, showing the wonderful gift of music he possesses. Frances Ross also gave a piano solo, and Mrs. James Wells read an advertisement for a wife with the virtues, etc. and referred applicants to one of the local young men.

The entertainment closed with a good sing-song with Stanley Fletcher accompanying on his piano accordion. It was a delightful social evening.

Glenville

Miss Helen Gould returned home on Sunday after visiting friends in Toronto for a week.

Misses Connie and Margaret Brodie of Aurora are holidaying with their grandmother, Mrs. G. Staley.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tomlin, Evelyn and Bob, Miss E. Douglas of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kellough and Laurene of Bradford spent Sunday at Mr. W. Gould's.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Jones and Mrs. T. Roskops of Owen Sound and Mr. D. McCollman of St. Thomas were visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Jones on Sunday.

Mr. John Dale of Coniston and Mr. Burton McKean of Coldwater called on their niece, Mrs. Wm. Gould, one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Scobie, Mr. and Mrs. Erickson and family of Toronto visited at Mr. Gordon Webster's on Sunday.

Master Burton Gould is holidaying with his cousin, Kenneth Wood, of Linton.

Miss Mary Eileen Somerville is holidaying with her cousins in Windsor.

Misses Connie Willis, Orma Wray, Alzina Owens and Ila Haines of Sharon spent last week on a motor trip in eastern Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. H. West, Mr. and Mrs. J. Jefferson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Norton and Mr. and Mrs. R. Black attended Mulock's picnic at Woodbridge on Saturday.

SNOWBALL LUKE GIBBONS IS OLDEST LIBERAL

The Sunday-school picnic which was held at Preston's Lake on Thursday last was quite largely attended considering the busy harvest time. The children especially enjoyed the water sports.

Quite a number from this vicinity attended the Mulock picnic at Woodbridge on Saturday and report a good time.

Master Vincent, Mary Helen and Joan Casey under went tonsil operations in St. Michael's Hospital last week and are recovering very successfully.

Mrs. Fennil Rothwell has been on the sick list. Her many friends hope she will soon be enjoying good health again.

Mrs. Robert Harrison is enjoying a visit with friends from Toronto this week.

Miss Edna Morning of Toronto spent the weekend at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell of Schomberg spent Sunday at Harry Mills'.

Congratulations are going to Luke Gibbons. He won the first prize at the Mulock picnic for being the oldest Liberal present. Mr. Gibbons is 94 years of age. He is exceptionally smart for his advanced years. Mr. Gibbons has always taken a keen interest in the Liberal politics and was a staunch helper for the Snowball Women's Institute, and is a life member of that organization. Mr. Gibbons lived in this vicinity for many years.

There was a large attendance at church on Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. W. Burton gave a very interesting sermon.

Era printers take pride in their workmanship.

BIG BUSINESS WAS NOT ALWAYS BIG

It is a source of satisfaction and an urge to still greater co-operation to observe from our records the progress of small concerns which it has been our privilege to assist in attaining their present position of prominence in the Canadian business field.

Through close association with Canadian business since 1856, the bank has obtained an intimate knowledge of its problems, which assures constructive co-operation that will best promote business expansion.

PETS AND PESTS

to have great ways of perpetuating their kind, as they are always with us. They like the plant of the garden huckleberry, apparently sucking out the juices of the plant and destroying it. I still keep picking them off, though their season of doing damage is apparently over.

Mr. Man found spraying too slow or unsatisfactory and with a nail and a stick knocked them off. I was surprised at the quarts he would bring in—all sizes; young fleshy ones and older winged bugs. He would destroy them by dumping them into a paper and burning them in the stove, and bring in quarts more. And yet he sprayed them three or four times.

We are not wanting corn borers or army worms or grasshoppers; we have all we can combat as it is. Yesterday a friend said she had bought corn, but there were so many worms in it she had to throw it out. These would be the corn weevil—not the corn borers. So now, we began with hens and corn and we will close with the hens and they would devour the worms with the corn and welcome them.

Recently I remarked I had one thing against Adam and Eve. Because of their sin of disobedience, briars and thorns and thistles and weeds came into being to give us lots of work. Without them, the friend remarked, we might not have enough to do. Possibly pests are to keep us busy.

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

INSTALLMENT 25

A Dinner Invitation
There was a slight air of nervousness about two of the newcomers for the first few minutes after their arrival, and even though fortified by their very excellent luncheon, they took their places with some trepidation. Elisaveta alone seemed perfectly at her ease and beaming happily. She let her hand rest in Haven's and drew him toward her with a smile of invitation.

"Will you please come and sit where you did last time?" she begged. "You give me confidence. I can't feel that the whole thing is not a dream when you are there. Haven obeyed with a will, and with self-consciousness. She smiled irresistibly across the room at Felix Drayton.

"Well," she continued, "have you any more bomb shells? Remember I have not lived in Russia since I was a child and I am not used to them. Am I to see my jewels or is there to be another shower of bank notes?"

"You take this little contraband in very sporting fashion, Princess," Felix Drayton observed, with an appreciative bow. "I wasn't at all sure that you wouldn't march along today with a lawyer and a Scotland Yard detective and start bullying my client and myself."

"I should never try to bully Mr. Haven," she murmured. "Why, it is he who has brought me my fortune." She held his hand for a moment tenderly. Madame smiled beneficently from her place. The colonel nodded approvingly. Felix Drayton sighed.

"I congratulate you, Princess, upon your common sense and your discretion," the latter declared. "Now we are all going to be very frank with one another. I must ask you these questions as a matter of form. You have told us that you are the Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff, but the law would require some proof."

Elisaveta dipped into her bag and handed out a passport and a small packet. "I have eleven other names," she confided. "You will find them all there; also you will find my mother's photograph and my father's. There is a bundle of letters written by my mother from the Ostrekoff Palace, in St. Petersburg. There is also my birth certificate. Beyond that, it is well known that Colonel Olinarsky was in the Tsar's household and was afterward my father's steward. Madame here was dame de compagnie to my mother before she married the colonel. They went to live in Nice, 18 or 19 years ago, and when the doctors ordered me out of Russia as a child, I was sent straight to here."

"Our own passports are here," Colonel Olinarsky volunteered, "and we can produce any other evidence of identity you require." "There is also this lock of my mother's," Elisaveta sighed, producing an old-fashioned ornament set with brilliants. "I am supposed to be remarkably like her."

"Is all this necessary?" Haven intervened, a little impatiently. "We can all make mistakes sometimes, but nature can't. You are more like your mother, Elisaveta, if I may call you so, than I could have believed possible. I was very fond of your mother."

"I hope some day," she said softly, with another swift upward glance at him, "that you will be very fond of me." Her eyes compelled his, but there was a touch of sadness in his smile as he looked down at her. She was distractingly pretty. If only that could mean what it ought to mean to him!

"Very well, then, we will proceed," Felix Drayton announced. "It is my duty to tell you, Princess, that Mr. Haven—after having literally fought his way across the Continent with your jewels, and met with a variety of adventures, which he will tell you about some day, I have no doubt—temporarily lost possession of them on his arrival in England. While he was unconscious they were taken away. At present we do not look upon it as an ordinary theft, and I know that my young friend is hoping to recover them. Supposing, however, he is not successful, he is, fortunately, well enough off to be able to do the great and quixotic thing. He intends to hand you the amount that the jewels would have produced—in cash as it can be determined—in your name."

"I think it is noble of him," she declared, enthusiastically. "It is an act of the most honorable action." Colonel Olinarsky concurred. "I am gratified to hear you say so," Felix Drayton observed, "because, although no conversation has passed between my client and myself upon the subject, you must know that legally he is not in any way liable. He has brought you today a check for £25,000.

The colonel turned to Elisaveta. "You are satisfied, Princess?" he asked. "Entirely," she assented. "I would trust Mr. Haven in any case. I think he has been wonderful. The only complaint I have," she added, "is that up to now he has told me so little about my father and mother and of the last time he saw them."

"It won't be very cheerful hearing, I'm afraid," Haven admitted. "It was only an hour or so before the final tragedy."

Madame leaned forward. "If that is all the business for today," she suggested graciously, "why should we not invite Mr. Haven to dine with us tonight and tell us what he can of those last days?" Elisaveta's mother, she added, turning to Haven, "was my devoted friend when we were young together."

"Do come," Elisaveta whispered. Haven hesitated. He was conscious of a queer sort of apprehension as he met the soft invitation of her eyes. She was too beautiful for any man to look at unmoved. She fired his imagination almost as much as she puzzled his inexperience.

"May we reverse it?" he begged. "Let me ask you all to dine with me. My father has had to go back to New York and has saddled me with a great house—Number 12A Grosvenor square—many servants and nothing for any one to do. It will be such a relief to the chef—probably stop his giving notice before my father gets back."

"We shall be delighted," Madame assented, rapidly running through in her mind the list of shops where she would be likely to find a suitable evening gown.

"At 8 o'clock, I suppose—or half past?" the colonel suggested, rising. "How I shall look forward to it!" Elisaveta murmured. "Let's say cocktails at 8 o'clock," Haven replied. "We can sit about before dinner if it isn't quite ready. What about joining us, Drayton?"

"Delighted," the latter accepted promptly. "Do you mind staying on for a moment, Haven? I want just a word with you about a different matter."

The visitors took their leave. Drayton resumed his seat. "I'm glad you asked me to dinner, Haven," he confided. "Not only because I'm sure I shall get a thundering good one, but I find these three people immensely interesting. I can't think why one has never heard of the girl before."

"She told me that she had been living very quietly abroad," Haven observed. "The Ostrekoff remittances seem to have become very irregular since the war. She has not even used her title until this news came."

"Very sensible of her," Drayton agreed. "I find all three of them most intriguing. I'm afraid I haven't been of much use to you yet, Haven, but I'm awfully glad you came to me. I can promise you won't have a very heavy bill of costs. I'm getting all my fun as I go along."

"You must say you've been of no use to me," Haven protested. "You traced the sale of that stone, the moment it was offered and you have given me the thing I wanted—Anna Kastellane's address—almost as soon as I asked for it."

night who was remarkably like one of the two who left in Odessa. They were the ones who were really after the jewels on their own account."

Felix Drayton coughed. "What about the young lady?" he suggested dryly. "Oh, I know," was the impatient reply. "But I haven't begun to believe yet that Anna Kastellane is a thief. This man is, I know. He wanted to go shares with me when he ran me to earth in the Prince's shooting box in Poland. He's the sort of fellow who would have murdered me afterward for my share if I'd agreed."

Felix Drayton rose thoughtfully to his feet. "Perhaps it's just as well, then," he remarked, "that the jewels aren't in your possession. If he finds that out, he may leave you alone. Number 12A Grosvenor Square, isn't it? Very well, then, I'll be about about 8."

Felix Drayton, when his friend had left him, returned to his place at his desk and sat for a moment in gentle and apparently aimless meditation. Then he drew the telephone book toward him, found a number and asked for it. In a few moments he was connected.

"Is that Barclays' Bank," he inquired. "Audley Street Branch?" "Good. Could I speak to Mr. Gubbins?" "Yes. . . . No—a private matter. I won't keep him a minute. Felix Drayton, the name. Thank you."

There followed a brief silence during which the latter studied his fingernails thoughtfully. Then he became alert. "That Mr. Gubbins? Felix Drayton speaking."

"Look here, Mr. Gubbins, I don't want to ask you to do anything unprofessional or to divulge any bank secrets, but if you feel at liberty to do so, I should like you to answer me a perfectly harmless question. You know my profession. You know I wouldn't suggest anything that might reflect on your discretion. Good. That's understood, then. If you don't wish to answer my query, I promise I shan't be offended. A client of mine, Mr. William H. Brown, son of Norman Haven, the great American financier—gave a check an hour ago in my presence to a certain young lady in this office. It was an open check for £25,000 payable to Elisaveta Ostrekoff. . . . Yes, all that. Well, my question's harmless enough, but don't worry yourself. There is no doubt about the genuineness of the check. If it was for £250,000, Mr. Haven could meet it many times over, and so far as I know the young lady has a perfect right to the money. I simply want to ascertain whether it has been cashed yet. . . . It has! I rather thought it might have been. . . . Beautiful! One of the most beautiful young women I've ever seen in my life. . . . You're quite right—Russian."

No, the elderly gentleman wasn't her father. He was the husband of her dame de compagnie—a Colonel Olinarsky. I'm exceedingly obliged to you, Mr. Gubbins. The matter has no significance except that it helps me to build up a theory, and you know how difficult that is sometimes. Good-by. Many thanks."

Felix Drayton replaced the receiver. Not a cloud disturbed his serene countenance. He was, in fact, perfectly happy. There was nothing in the world he loved so much as being puzzled—and he was puzzled.

Tells Of 59 Cent Price Range In Island Fish

Co-operation Is Improving Conditions For Fishermen

By LEONARD HARMAN

We are now staying for a night at a little village along the north-west coast of Cape Breton Island. There are 80 people visiting St. Francis Xavier University and taking a tour of the district where that institution has stamped its indelible imprint.

On the rugged coast are shabby, poverty-bound villages where the people fish out an existence with the help of lobster and cod. In their spare time they grow a few potatoes among the rocks. Fish for which they receive as low as a cent a pound have been known to sell as high as 60 cents a pound in American cities.

Of course this is an extreme spread. But there are many cases where the fishermen now receive four times as much by co-operative canning and marketing as they did formerly by taking what the dealers would give them.

These fish are of great quality. Never have we tasted salmon which compared with that we had yesterday. They even put cream in their ice cream. (That is only where they can afford such a delicacy in the more prosperous farm communities.) But there is more than salmon and ice cream and scenic grandeur.

We stopped in front of the co-operative store at Mabou this morning. While there, I cornered a lad of 14 as he sat in his buggy. His name was Hughie Macdonald. He informed me in an accent as broad as that of a Scotch immigrant. He said his people had been living on Cape Breton for over 150 years. A few of the youngsters cannot speak Gaelic; but a few of the older men can speak English. It is as if they were still in the Hebrides. Incidentally, the village is entirely Roman Catholic.

To the naming of Macdonalds there is no end in these parts. In the town of Antigonish there are nearly 200 of them on the voters' list. I had a great chat with a shoemaker who happens to be a cousin of the great Professor A. B. Macdonald. With liberal profanity he praised A. B.'s Christian virtues. For profanity and smuggled liquor are common here.

Some of the little farms just have one horse or one ox. I asked an agricultural representative about the breeding of the cattle. He didn't seem to think that they had much breeding. But one does see such unique individuals as a Jersey with Hereford head and Ayrshire horns. There are, however, some good herds in the better farming areas.

Just at present we are receiving a lesson on Credit Unions in the French language. The young lady has been over to the States and seems to know her way about. She also speaks English very well indeed.

VIVIAN WORK ON CHURCH TO START SOON

Everyone is glad to welcome a little cooler weather.

Mr. Cox took the service in the Vivian church Sunday morning in the absence of Mr. Rowan, taking the story of David and Goliath for his subject. Mrs. H. Phoenix entertained friends from Toronto on Sunday. Mr. McPherson entertained friends from Cleveland, Ohio, Regina, Sask., and Elmira, Ont., during the past week.

The material for the new church is nearly all assembled and as soon as the busy season with the farmers is over, it is hoped to commence work. Mr. Symons, blacksmith of Vivian, is not very well, and may have to go to Toronto for an x-ray.

John Morley of Vivian died Aug. 21, at Weston Sanitarium.

The Era is Ontario's first paid-in-advance weekly.

CEDAR VALLEY MANY DELEGATES VISIT WOOD LOTS

Over 200 representatives of councils in ten Ontario counties visited the reforestation areas near here last Wednesday.

Speakers at the noon luncheon held at Vivian were Col. W. P. Mulock, M. P.; Morgan Baker, M. L. A.; and Dr. George Christie, president of O. A. C. Guelph.

Dr. Christie advocated increased reforestation throughout the counties of the province. Mr. Walter Widdfield of Timmins, spent Friday with his father, Mr. Nelson Widdfield. Twenty-two children of the primary class of the Church of Christ, Sunday-school attended the picnic given by the teacher, Mrs. Charles Brandon, Jr., at her home on Thursday afternoon.

John Bosworth is raising his barn this Thursday.

Mr. William Reid of Pine Orchard was buried Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Reid was a pupil of Shrubmount school at the time of its opening and was secretary of the school for many years before leaving that neighborhood.

Ansnoeveld

Mr. and Mrs. K. Miedema and John spent the weekend in Burlington and Hamilton visiting friends. Miss Jean Nydam of Windsor has returned home after spending several weeks with her grandfather, Mr. H. Horlings.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Turkstra and children of Toronto visited Mrs. Turkstra's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Havings, on Sunday.

Mr. John Rupke and Miss Katherine Rupke of Hamilton spent Sunday here. Miss Louise Van Dyken has returned to Hamilton after spending a few weeks with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Deenik of Huttonville visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Nienhouse on Sunday.

Miss Margaret Miedema is spending a few weeks in Chatham.

MOUNT ALBERT ARTHUR HARRISON DIES IN 31ST YEAR

After a lingering illness of some months, Arthur Harrison passed away at his home in the village on Friday of last week. He was born here and spent all his life in the community. He was in his 31st year. He is survived by his widow, formerly Hazel Risebrough, and one sister, Mrs. Gould of Holt, and three brothers, Jesse and Norman, also of Holt and Rev. David Harrison, a missionary in China. The funeral took place on Monday from his late residence to Hartman cemetery. Rev. R. V. Wilson conducted the service.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Case and Mrs. Case's mother, Mrs. A. Case, and Mrs. Giles of Newmarket, motored to Rochester and Niagara Falls and spent a week visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ross and Barry returned home to Toronto on Saturday after a two weeks' holiday in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Harmon and Mr. John Harmon spent the weekend with friends at Mount Forest.

A number from here attended the Mulock picnic at Woodbridge on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Mildred Franklin underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Lockwood clinic, Toronto, last week and is recovering nicely.

Miss Elsie Steeper had a miscellaneous shower at her home on Saturday evening for Miss Helen Dunn, a former Mount Albert girl, now of Toronto, who is a bride of this week.

Always a warm spot in their hearts for the old home where they have lived frequently brings back past residents of Mount Albert and the most recent visitors have been at the home of Mrs. W. Rear—Miss L. J. McKewon, sister of Mrs. Rear, from Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Orville Gould of Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. Young (nee Mary Jane Wilson) also from Rochester, and who was accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Robt. Oil of that city.

The members of the Woman's Association of the United Church entertained the ladies of Stouffville society on Wednesday evening of last week and had a very enjoyable evening with their visitors and hope they will come again.

The W. M. S. of the United Church are holding a tea at the home of Mrs. Everton Quibell on Wednesday, Aug. 31, to which everyone is invited.

The Women's Institute have put window blinds in the new hall which adds much to the appearance both outside and in.

CHRISTADELPHIANS

L. O. O. F. Hall, Mount Albert August 28, 7:30 p.m., Standard Time Bible address—Christ, the future King. Speaker—Henry Jones, Toronto. Bring your bibles. No collection. All welcome.

Mount Pleasant

Harvest is drawing to a close. Next will be fall wheat sowing and exhibition time.

Quite a number attended the Young People's meeting at Mrs. Hopkins' last Wednesday evening.

Robert Davidson had the misfortune to have a section of the stone wall give way under his barn, letting 600 bushels of wheat fall into the stable below.

Fortunately no animals were in that end of the stable, except two fat hogs and they escaped injury.

Mr. Smith will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday and then he expects to go to England to finish his studies.

Mount Albert Gets Margin Of One Run In Keswick Play-Off

Stage Mighty Come-Back In Sixth To Overtake Rival's Lead

Keswick

The Lakeside Branch of W. I. will meet at Mrs. N. Shortreed's for their meeting Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 31. An interesting program is being provided. Roll call will be answered by a salad plate.

The Christian church song service Sunday evening, Aug. 28, at 7:30 will be an all musical evening. It is hoped many will be present to enjoy it.

Between four and five hundred people have been attending the temporary Roman Catholic church here this summer and owing to the large congregation a new and permanent chapel is being planned for the near future by Rev. Dr. W. D. Muckle, pastor.

The Mount Albert team was held scoreless until the fifth inning and Laughton was pitching great ball for his team. Watts singled and Mitchell hit for two bases to score Watts for Mount Albert's first run.

Keswick added another run in the sixth inning. Trivett went to second on a fly ball dropped in right field by Davis, and scored on a line drive in left field by Hodgins.

Horace Pearson's team scored six runs in their half of the sixth inning. Draper was safe on a bunt, Morton and Robertson walked, Stewart doubled, scoring Draper and Morton.

Case singled and Robertson scored. Case went to second base on a passed ball. Watts was safe when Hodgins dropped the third strike and the ball got away on him. Davis singled and Stewart scored.

Manager Doug Trivett took Laughton out, and Waldon came in to pitch for Keswick. Mitchell hit a grounder to Trivett, who threw to Hodgins to cut Case off at the plate. Ward grounded to Waldon and Watts was out on a forced play at home plate. Hodgins threw wild to Trivett and Davis and Mitchell scored. Draper was out on a high fly to centre field.

Keswick came one run short of putting the game on even terms in the last inning when they scored two runs. Waldon walked, Tomlinson singled, and Badlen, batting for Trivett, hit a double.

Teams—Mount Albert: Mitchell, p; Ward, 2b; Draper, cf; Morton, 1b; Robertson, 3b; Stewart, ss; Case, 1b; Watts, c; Davis, rf.

Keswick: R. Connell, ss; Prosser, 2b; Waldon, 1b and p; Tomlinson, 1b; Trivett, 3b; Laughton, p and lf; Mahoney, cf; Hodgins, c; L. Connell, rf.

RAVENSHOE POSTAL SERVICE IS DISCONTINUED

Many of the residents throughout the district are very sorry to lose the post office. It has been so convenient for orders, parcels and stamps. The nearest office now will be at Queensville. The mail man will certainly find a much larger route.

G. H. Nighswander is appointed to look after resident licenses here.

The game warden is Percy Pollock.

A large crowd from here attended the annual corn roast at Carl Anderson's on Saturday evening. Russell Pollock was one of the lucky ticket winners.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Smith and Annie, also Mrs. Wm. Sanderson motored to Kirkfield to visit friends on Sunday. Mrs. Wm. J. Grant, better known as Mrs. Anthony Smith, returned home with them on a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Graves, Mrs. Sanderson and Miss M. MacDonald attended the Mulock picnic on Saturday.

Mrs. Robert Reid is gradually gaining strength after her operation. It is hoped to see her home soon.

Charles Sedore is ill. Masters Lorne and Reggie Denne, Belhaven, have been visiting their uncle, Mr. E. Pollard.

Last Friday Master Lloyd Pollard entertained a few little friends at a party which all enjoyed. They report a fine time.

Mrs. Jack Thorndike, Toronto, and Misses Pearl and Connie Smith, Newmarket, were visitors at their uncle's, Thos. Smith's, on Tuesday.

Mr. Max Glover had a very bad accident on Friday while hauling grain. He caught three fingers in the pulley and part of one finger was torn off. The others were badly mangled.

Mackie visited relatives in London. Miss Joyce Collins and Mr. Elman Glebe of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Evans on Sunday.

Mr. John Salter of Newmarket visited Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kitley on Sunday.

Sunday-school will be held at the usual time on Sunday, 10 a.m. Everyone welcome.

There will be no service at the United church on Sunday next, but the regular service will be held on Sunday, Sept. 4 at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. M. Shaw and Mr. James Shaw returned to Hamilton on Monday after spending the last two weeks with Mrs. Shaw.

Elmhurst Beach

The corn roast on Saturday night given by Carl Anderson for the Elmhurst Beach association was a huge success.

People came from far and near and all report a good time. There were lucky tickets drawn during the evening's entertainment and some of the local people were lucky enough to get some of these prizes.

Mrs. Ralph Draper and son, Will, visited in Markham last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Miller entertained a few of their friends on Tuesday night to a birthday party given for their twin daughters, Vera and Verna.

A number from around the vicinity attended the Mulock picnic on Saturday last.

Mrs. White and children from Parry Sound are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Obce Peters.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and family from London spent the weekend with Mrs. Ralph Draper.

Willow Beach Team Noses Out Sharon By Counter In Seventh

Game Is First Lake Simcoe Softball Semi-Final Encounter

The first game of the Lake Simcoe softball league semi-finals was played at Willow Beach on Friday with Sharon the visiting club. The game was very closely contested and it was not until the last innings that Willow Beach was able to come out in front by the score of 10-9.

McNeil, of Willow Beach, allowed 15 hits and had 7 strike outs. Ganton, of Sharon, had 15 hits charged against him and struck out two batters. Both pitchers received poor support at times and several errors were credited to each team.

The hitting and fielding of Breen in left field for Sharon stood out above the rest of the players.

Sharon opened the scoring in the first inning when after Roy Eves fanned, Don Smith bunted and was safe at first on an error by McKelvey. W. Newfeldt walked, Breen singled, filling the bases.

Jack Smith singled and Don Smith and W. Newfeldt scored.

Ross Eves singled and Breen was out at the plate on a close play when he tried to score from second base on the hit.

"Pete" Newfeldt singled filling the bases again. Cook was out at first base on a grounder to Cameron for the third out.

Willow Beach scored three runs in the second inning on singles by B. Fairbairn, Cameron and doubles by McNeil and Cooper. Sharon came back strong in the third inning to tally 3 runs.

Breen singled to open the inning, Jack Smith walked, and Ross Eves hit a triple scoring Breen and Jack Smith. Pete Newfeldt singled and took second on a passed ball. Cook struck out.

Ganton hit a grounder to McNeil who threw him out at first. McKelvey pegged to Thompson, and Pete Newfeldt was out trying to steal third base.

Willow Beach, in their half of the third inning, scored five runs when, after two runners were declared out, C. Fairbairn walked, Powell got to first on an error by Ross Eves, and B. Fairbairn doubled, scoring C. Fairbairn.

Roy Eves, Sharon's right fielder, let Cameron's easy fly ball drop, and Powell and Bruce Fairbairn crossed the plate. McNeil walked and Cooper and McKelvey singled with Cameron and McNeil scoring. Hodge popped to Ganton to end a very bad inning for the Sharon team.

Sharon came close to tying the score in the fourth when Don Smith and Breen singled and Jack Smith hit for three bases, scoring two runs.

Bill Newfeldt's men went out in front in the sixth inning when Bill walked, Breen hit a triple into centre field, and stole home with the Willow Beach infield gathered around third base, and no player watching the plate. The Beach team looked very bad on this play, but they tied the score on a single by Hodge, and double by C. Fairbairn.

McNeil held the Sharon team scoreless in the seventh, and it appeared it would end a tie game when Bruce Fairbairn went out, Ganton to Bill Newfeldt, Cameron walked and McNeil hit a fly ball to Don Smith. Cooper singled and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Jim McKelvey singled, scoring Cameron and the ball game was over with the final score 10-9 in favor of Willow Beach.

Pete Newfeldt of Sharon had the misfortune to sprain his ankle in the third inning sliding into third base, but was able to continue after a short rest.

Line-ups—Willow Beach: McKelvey, 1b; Hodge, ss; Thompson, 3b; C. Fairbairn, c; Powell, rf; B. Fairbairn, cf; Cameron, 2b; McNeil, p; Cooper, lf.

Sharon: Roy Eves, rf; D. Smith, ss; W. Newfeldt, 1b; Breen, 1b; J. Smith, cf; Ross Eves, 2b; P. Newfeldt, cf; Cook, 3b; Ganton, p.

CHARITY SOFTBALL ATTRACTS 2,000

Nearly 2,000 people were present at Keswick on Saturday evening to see Mayor Day's "All Star Team," picked from the summer resorts, defeat Conny Smythe's pro. hockey players in a fast benefit softball game for the late Jack English.

"Mine Boy" Alex Levinsky pitched for the "Pros," and "Bad Man" Red Horner and "Reggie" Hamilton made up a real defence on third first base. "Goalies," Jackie Forbes and Roy Worsters composed the rest of the infield for the hockey players. In the outfield "Flash" Hollett, George Parsons and Jimmy Fowler worked as hard chasing fly balls as though the Stanley cup was at stake.

Conny Smythe got in an argument with the umpire at the plate and was escorted from the player's bench by the police. "Tiny" Thompson of the Beach team collided with Horner at third base and knocked "Red" down. The crowd got a real pleasure out of this comedy, put on by the players.

Byron King of Keswick supplied amplifiers for the game, and Jack Maughan did the announcing. A softball and bat, autographed by the pro. hockey players, were sold, the ball selling for $10 and the bat bringing $12.
